

Clay's Corner

I spent several hours on the phone over the course of the last two or three of weeks talking a couple through a very difficult time in their lives. They have two sons, both adopted. Each came with his own unique problems. Each son was "rescued", so to speak, from a life of uncertainty by two people who have spent their lives committed to God and to each other. The oldest son is now in college. The youngest is in junior high.

I cannot share with you their problem. I can share with you however the glory of their triumph. Today, as of this writing, is completely different for this family of four than it was before I had a sit-down, face-to-face visit with them in San Angelo, Texas this past Sunday evening.

We met in my oldest daughter's home. After everyone met and greeted each other, my family retreated to the back rooms of the house to allow this family privacy with me. And I preached, I encouraged and I prayed. The picture that stood before them before we met was bleak at best. There was no hope. There was no recourse. The future events and circumstance for this family had already been cast in stone by the powers that be. And the dad was angry, his heart beginning to show signs of hardening. The wife, and mother of these boys, was in tears and her heart was completely broken. And as I struggled with my own weakness, I inwardly prayed for wisdom to lead this family forward into the uncertain days of darkness that lay ahead. And it was at this point that God "showed up".

I am still smiling as I reflect on the events of Sunday night, where even my own faith was being tested by circumstances completely beyond my knowledge and control, and the phone message I received Monday evening.

When Paul told the church in Rome, "And we know that for those who love God, all things work together for good, for those who are called according to his purpose," he wasn't just trying to cheer them up. He firmly believed and meant what he said.

And when God told Isaiah, "For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, declares the LORD. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways and my thoughts than your thoughts," He was giving hope where there had been no hope before.

I shared these two passages with this family, along with several other passages from scripture. I talked with them. I encouraged them. I spoke boldly and firmly with them. I challenged them to resist the devil without fear. And then I prayed with them.

As they stood up to leave, I could see a sense of determination to press on in the face of uncertainty and hopelessness that was not there when they first arrived. There was hope now, where none existed before. Their future held nothing but hurt and uncertainty when they arrived. Their future was back in God's hands when they left. And Monday morning, our prayers were answered. The dad called and left me a message Monday afternoon. And I have been smiling ever since. God is Good. God hears our plight. And God still works all things for good for those who love and trust Him. May God always be glorified in our lives.

PRAYER UPDATES

We extend sympathy to the family and friends of Jane Johnson, Susan Barnick's boss, who passed away on Tuesday. A funeral service was held Friday at First United Methodist Church.

Maelyn Robertson was born Thursday at 10 weeks early. She is in the hospital in Abilene. Her parents are Paris and Lexus Robertson, friends of Kevin and Victoria Johnson.

Pauline Alvarez is at her son's home in Luling (845 S Magnolia, Luling, TX 78648) for about a month while she recovers from knee replacement and undergoes physical therapy. She is greatly appreciative of any notes, calls, or visits.

Terry Boaz, Haley Ratliff's step-mother, is at Hendrick Hospital in Abilene, room 7094 (1900 Pine Street, 79601). She has an infection in her leg and will be in the hospital for six weeks as the doctors had to remove all of the hardware from her leg, and the leg must remain open until the infection is cleared. At that point, they will replace the hardware and do a total knee replacement. If this procedure is unsuccessful, they will have to amputate the leg.

Kelli Boyles, the Babbs' friend from Zavalla, suffered a brain aneurysm on Monday and was care-flighted to Houston where she remains on life support. Kelli is 37 years old, a wife, and mother of four children.

Sandra Jetton requests prayers as she continues to struggle with mixed connective tissue disease, an autoimmune disease. She is hopeful the latest increase in medicines will help.
