Clay's Corner

There is a saying in social media these days, "I am just going to leave this here." From what I gather, it denotes a comment or statement that someone wants to make without garnering a lot of discussion or debate. It usually indicates something thought provoking, or sometimes something humorous, is about to be said. Either way, most of the time the person dropping "the bomb" will just say what he or she wants to say and move along; if you encounter "the bomb" you can ignore it or not. It's just there. It's usually important. But sometimes it's not. Today's, "I am just going to leave this here" is important. It's an FYI.

A discussion I recently took part in about idolatry and what constitutes idolatry led to someone saying this:

"I wonder if this is some truth. Do we love our sports teams more than the person wearing the opposing team's colors? Do we love our flag and country more than we love the hurting people in other countries? Do we have so much school pride that we would hurt (with words or deeds) those at the school across town?"

We are called to love God and love others, and sometimes we just don't do a very good job of either of those, but our friends know what team, school, band, and political party we love. We are willing to invest time, effort, and money into those loves-but not into lives."

I, Clay Mason, do not wonder if there is any truth in the above statement. I witness it every day. As a "watchman" I have no choice but to shout out the warnings from God that all who take part in idolatry will not enter the Kingdom of Heaven.

What constitutes idolatry? Anything and everything that takes precedence over the greatest and second greatest commandments.

I can't stress that enough. More than that, I cannot stress the fact that thought you may claim to love God with your whole being, you cannot, let me say that again, YOU CANNOT FULFILL THE FIRST AND NOT FULFILL THE SECOND. It doesn't work that way.

That's "the bomb". I'll just leave it there. For what it's worth.

Have a blessed week.
